How does induction for newly qualified teachers work? Induction is completed across the equivalent of three school terms, with assessment at the end of each term. You can undertake induction on either a full-time or part-time basis. During induction you should receive the following support, in addition to your individual programme of professional development: 10% reduction in your teaching timetable, in addition to the standard 10% planning, preparation and assessment (PPA) time available to teachers. The appropriate body decides whether or not you have met the requirements for successfully completing induction and writes to you, the head teacher and your employer setting out the decision. The appropriate body must also notify the Teaching Regulation Agency of the outcome. They replace the existing Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) and Core standards, and the GTCE’s Code of Conduct and Practice for Registered Teachers in England. The teachers’ standards will be used to assess all trainees working towards QTS, and all those completing their statutory induction period. They will also be used to assess the performance of all teachers subject to the Education (School Teachers’ Appraisal) (England) Regulations 2012. After the induction year, teachers would be expected to continue to meet the teachers’ standards and to broaden and deepen their professional attributes, knowledge, understanding and skills within that context.
