(Delilah Hansen)
Almost immediately after my father's death my mother sent me to the Convent School, a branch of which was in Agra, and another in Simla. My parents at my birth had dedicated me to God. It was the earnest desire of both before they died that I should, if I lived, become a nun; and probably it was with this object in view that I was sent at such a tender age to school; so that my earliest recollections are associated with the black-robed Sisters, and the quiet hush of convent life; and side by side with the sweet-faced image of my mother rises up that of gentle Sister Agatha, who specially cared for me. Between these two souls there seemed a bond of deep love. My mother never said much about my father, but whilst in her presence one felt impressed that she had undergone some great sorrow. How deep that sorrow was to her (as a Catholic) I learned in after years, whilst her soul was hovering on the borders of eternity; and then she only divulged it to me under obedience to her confessor, who hoped it would be an inducement to me to enter a religious life; and the shadow that rested on my mother's life has entered and cast its reflection on mine. And to-night, many who judge me harshly would feel more sympathy for my shortcomings if they knew the struggle I have had to undergo all these years. Shepherd (Sister Magdalene Adelaide), Consecrated Penitent of the Arno’s Court Convent, Bristol, England. Paperback. $14.95. What was so special about Mary Magdalene, that Jesus chose her to walk out such an extravagant story? Who was she, and what happened to her after the resurrection of Christ? Not every Gospel account of Jesus’ life, death, and resurrection focus on the same events and details, but all four attest that Mary Magdalene witnessed Jesus’ crucifixion and burial. Her connection to Jesus was undeniable. The healing that took place in her life on account of His miraculous presence inspired the rededication of her life to follow Jesus to His burial. . . . until she could no longer physically see her Savior. Mary’s desperate longing to be close to Christ, to serve Him in any way she could, became the way she lived her life.
