The Playboy of the Western World and Other Plays
the Complete Plays of J. M. Synge

By J. M. Synge

Edmund John Millington Synge (1871-1909), an Irish poet, playwright and prose writer, was also one of the cofounders of the storied Abbey Theatre. Synge was known as a strange and enigmatic man, quiet and reserved, not even understood by his own family members. After graduating from school, Synge decided to pursue music, but his shy nature prevented him from performing, causing him to turn to literature as a creative outlet. When it opened at the Abbey Theatre in 1907, his most acclaimed play, The Playboy of the Western World, met rioting and chaos, as it garnered a very hostile reaction from the Irish public. Arthur Griffith, an Irish nationalist, described the play as a vile and inhuman story told in the foulest language we have ever listened to from a public platform. Synge suffered from Hodgkins disease, and died shortly before his 38th birthday. This collection includes: The Playboy of the Western World, Riders To The Sea, In The Shadow Of The Glen, The Tinkers Wedding, Deirdre Of The Sorrows, and The Well of the Saints.

The climax of The Playboy of the Western World occurs when the local residents discover that Christy's father is still alive. According to the second definition, the climax occurs when Christy "kills" his father a second time but reconciles with him after the old man recovers. Synge's Style. Synge was a master at writing lively dialogue laced with exaggeration and colorful imagery. In writing The Playboy of the Western World, as in my other plays, I have used one or two words only that I have not heard among the country people of Ireland, or spoken in my own nursery before I could read the newspapers. The Playboy of the Western World is a three-act play written by Irish playwright John Millington Synge and first performed at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, on 26 January 1907. It is set in Michael James Flaherty's public house in County Mayo (on the west coast of Ireland) during the early 1900s. It tells the story of Christy Mahon, a young man running away from his farm, claiming he killed his father.
