
This book explores these key issues in Japanese as a second language. Ten empirical studies in collection target select pragmatic features of Japanese and investigate the learners' use of them as an indicator of their pragmatic competence. The target pragmatic features are wide-ranging, among them honorifics, speech style, reactive tokens, sentence final particles, speech acts of various types, formulaic utterances, and indirect expressions. Each study explicitly prompts the connection between pragmalinguistic analysis and curriculum development, has come to be increasingly ordered by an empirically-grounded understanding of pragmatics and pragmatics of conflict analysis (Issue in Interdisciplinary Studies, Vol 3).
